

Native American Heritage Month Resources

November is Native American Heritage Month. We'd like to share some resources so that our community can engage with Native American history and culture and learn together from Indigenous leaders. We desire to glean from the wisdom of Native leaders and discover how we might amplify their voices, honor their diverse cultures, and stand together against systems that don't uphold their dignity as image bearers. We hope that you will look through the list and choose at least one or two ways to engage with Native American heritage and leadership this month and beyond.
